

EXPECTING A FREIGHT SHIPMENT?

Before you sign...

Although we pack our fragile orders carefully, there are rare occasions when orders become damaged in transit.

Mission Restaurant Supply is not responsible for orders damaged in transit.

It is very important that you follow these delivery instructions:

STEP 1

Do not sign for your shipment without prior inspection. Freight companies are responsible for inspecting items when picking up a shipment from us, and if in good condition, they sign for it.

STEP 2

If there is visual damage to the packaging, the driver is required to wait for you to thoroughly inspect the equipment.

STEP 3

Visually inspect equipment deliveries for any damages before signing the receipt.

If you find damages, you have options...

OPTION 1:
Refuse the unit

OPTION 2:
Accept the unit with freight damages

Take photos of the equipment fully packaged, at various angles, and several stages of unpacking the equipment.

Sign for the shipment, and submit a freight damage claim to the freight company within 5 days of receipt.

NOTE: Once you sign for your shipment, even if you signed it "Damaged," "Subject to Inspection," or make any other notes about your delivery, you will need to file a freight damage claim with the freight company. Mission Restaurant Supply is not liable for those damages or the outcome of your freight claim.

Have questions or concerns?

When in doubt or for questions throughout any part of this process, contact us at 800-319-0690 prior to signing for equipment freight shipments.

For our full policy on damages, visit www.missionrs.com/about-us/policies#DamagePolicy.

MISSION
RESTAURANT SUPPLY